Manager Davis and Teammates Honored by Sport Luminaries at Baseball Banquet

Miller, Dykes, Collins and Stites Praise Three-Circuit Champions.

AWARD PLAYERS PRIZES

Contributions Made by Fans For Uniforms For Next Year.

By John Uberti.

In one of the most colorful and dramatic episodes of baseball advancement held in Narberth since the inauguration of America's foremost diversion here in 1910, Manager Gene Davis, young pilot of the borough's three-circuit champions, and his teammates were extended the highest and most extraordinary ovation ever conferred upon any other baseball enthusiast in these parts for many moons.

Two hundred and fifty loyal supporters of the Narberth Ball Club, including sports moguls of various capacities, attended the occasion, which was marked by a pompous splendor, keen merriment and an elaborately-prepared program of speakers.

"Bill" Durbin, vice president of the Narberth Club and veteran of baseball who has seen service with innumerable clubs of high calibre, was the choice of the fans for toastmaster for the event. Seated beside him, to his right on an elevated platform, were former State Senator Fletcher W. Stites, Eddie Collins and William Crowell, while to his left were Bing Miller, Ted Meredith, Olympic quarter and half-mile champion; Manager Ebe, of the Penn A. C., and the Oakmont orator, Jimmy Dykes.

At the foot of the platform was located the table around which were seated the champions of the Main Line League, and other executives of the club. In the background four elongated tables bore a capacity gathering of two hundred.

Following the banquet "Bill" Durbin was kept busy until adjournment, introducing the luminary personages who honored the club by their presence.

Manager Davis, the only man to manage a Main Line team winning three titles in one season, and moreover, his first year in office, was the recipient of immense applause from the audience when introduced to be tendered the Spalding Trophy, emblem awarded the champions of the Main

Boy, Jumping From Truck, Crushed to Death by Another

A stolen ride on a motortruck on Monday cost the life of James Casavecchia, 12, son of Lewis Casavecchia, 249 Iona Avenue, Narberth.

The boy, according to witnesses, hopped from the truck on which he had been riding and ran into the path of a coal truck driven by George Greiner, West Manayunk, in Woodbine Avenue near Iona Avenue. He was crushed by the second machine. Greiner was arrested and held without bail by Magistrate Kromer.

At the hearing held Monday night Greiner was dismissed.

Pennypacker, School Head, Dies Suddenly

L. M. Senior High Principal For Eighteen Years Succumbs to Heart Attack

AN ABLE ADMINISTRATOR

Charles Brady Pennypacker, principal of the Lower Merion Senior High School for the past eighteen years, died suddenly of a heart attack early Sunday morning at his home, 110 Ardmore Avenue, Ardmore. He was 54.

Mr. Pennypacker came to Lower Merion as principal in the fall of 1912, two years after the Senior High School had been built. The tremendous growth which has taken place in the school under his able administration is indicated by the increased enrollment. Two hundred students comprised the entire senior high school of four classes in 1912 when Mr. Pennypacker took up his duties. Today the enrollment in three classes, the Junior High having absorbed the first year high school, numbers 743 students.

Always a keen supporter of school sports, Mr. Pennypacker was instrumental in the construction of the school athletic fields which were completed in 1915.

During Mr. Pennypacker's regime the work of the Senior High School has undergone tremendous expansion. The teaching staff has been greatly increased to keep pace with the enrollment and new departments of instruction have been added. Largely

Plan Continuation of Sunday Evening Forums

As a result of the Forums held in the Baptist Church on the Sunday evenings of October, there has come a request that these subjects be continued and further opportunity be given to discuss them. In response to this request the pastor, Rev. Robert E. Keighton, has agreed to meet with those interested at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Wood, 237 Forest Avenue, Narberth, on the evening of Thursday, November 7. At that time a plan for future meetings and a program for consideration will be presented.

If you were interested in the Forums or if you feel that these meetings of a small study group may have benefit for you, will you plan to be present? If you are coming will you notify Mrs. Wood or Mr. Keighton by letter or phone?

Sparton Radio Fulfills All Claims, Dealers Say

Recent purchasers in this territory of the new Sparton Radio, Model 111, have been well pleased with the "face-to-face" realism of "Radio's Richest Voice," according to the Narberth Electric Shop and Robert Littler, Jr., who are exclusive Sparton dealers here.

They assert that this new de luxe Sparton gives as satisfactory a performance as the actual presence of the entertainers, a selectivity that enables the user to tune into and hold definitely any one station and a "pick-up" power that can bring in stations impossible to get with many other receivers.

Combined with a craftsmanship in cabinet making that rivals the choicest art of the ancient guilds, this new Sparton de luxe Model 111 is said to offer its owner the very latest present-hour development of radio. For example, the famous Equasone circuit with Band-pass tuning gives perfect station-by station selectivity over the entire dial. Users can tune in one station and hold it for the entire program regardless of what else is on the air. And with its powerful ten tubes, two rectifying tubes and the dynamic tion de luxe Model 111 is said to offer amplification without distortion, giving a whisper or stentorian shout with a personal realism and perfect natural tone.

The local Sparton dealers, the Narberth Electric Shop and Robert Littler, Jr., enthused with the growing supremacy of Sparton in the radio world, are urging the public to accept a home demonstration of the de luxe or any Sparton model, preferably side by side with other radio. The reason is—that the only true test for any radio is in the home, under average conditions, operated by the owner.

Explains Two Audio Stages of New Radio

The new Eveready Screen Grid Receiver, now being shown by the Wunder Battery and Electric Service, 108 Forest Avenue, Narberth, uses two audio stages. The reason for this, and the superiority of performance over a set which uses only one audio stage, are explained by Mr. Wunder as follows:

"When two tubes of the 245 type are used in push-pull," he says, "their full volume capabilities can not be obtained with but one audio stage. More amplification is needed between the detector and the push-pull stage. Otherwise attempts to force the volume up will result in overloading the detector before the 245 tubes have reached the limit of their volume producing ability. Such an arrangement would be equivalent to putting a Lincoln rear axle under a Ford car. The Lincoln rear axle could handle much more power than the Ford engine can generate and, in such an installation, the advantages of the heavier axle would be of no use.

"In the Eveready set the increased power which the 245 tubes can handle is developed by the extra audio stage. It is a low-gain, resistance coupled stage, and, being resistance coupled, it introduces no distortion. Therefore the tone quality is the same as if the additional stage was omitted."

Another reason for Eveready's use of the extra audio stage, according to Mr. Wunder, is that it provides the amplification necessary for satisfactory reproduction of phonograph records. Turning the tuning drum of the Eveready Screen Grid set to the position marked "Phono" operates a switch which converts the power detector into an audio amplifier, and at the same time establishes the connection between the electric pick-up and receiver. This arrangement provides three audio stages for playing phonograph records, insuring ample volume regardless of the make of pick-up used.

School Authorities Join in Tributes

Downs, Snow and Faculty Praise Pennypacker in Glowing Terms.

Tributes to the memory of Charles B. Pennypacker were made this week by his faculty, by Superintendent of Schools S. Edgar Downs, and by Edward H. Snow, principal of the Junior High School.

Mr. Downs' statement:

"In the death of Charles B. Pennypacker, principal of the Lower Merion High School, the students have lost a friend whose every ambition was centered upon their physical, mental and spiritual development. He rejoiced in their successes, grieved for their failures, reproved, admonished and encouraged day by day; proving through the eighteen years of his work in Lower Merion that in him they had a friend who understood them, who believed in them, and who expected of them nothing less than a life of service to high ideals. To him, this alone was a life of true success.

"The worth of an uninterrupted service, during a period of thirty-seven years, in moulding the character of the youth of our State is far beyond estimation, but the united testimony of the great body of the alumni and of a host of associates who knew him intimately, whose judgment is matured and point of view clarified by the perspective of the years, testify to the potent influence of his life and council.

"Those of us who have worked beside him and who, during these years, have come into closest touch with him know best the value of the persistent good cheer, the quiet and unobtrusive helpfulness, the high ideals, and the fine spirit of the men. His influence will always remain with us—the influence of a good man with a great heart—a Christian gentleman."

"S. E. DOWNS."

Mr. Snow's statement:

"The sudden death of Mr. Pennypacker has left us all too stunned to make a statement that would anywhere near do justice to the sterling worth of the man. Professionally Mr. Pennypacker was a rugged, tireless worker whose whole heart and soul was wrapped up in the Lower Merion Senior High School, yet whose heart was big enough to find a place in his affections for all Lower Merion activities and interests. Now that he is gone we are going to find how very much he has filled the hearts of the boys and girls with whom he has been associated.

"My most intimate associations with Mr. Pennypacker were made when we were away together on various State

Memorial Service For Principal Packs Auditorium

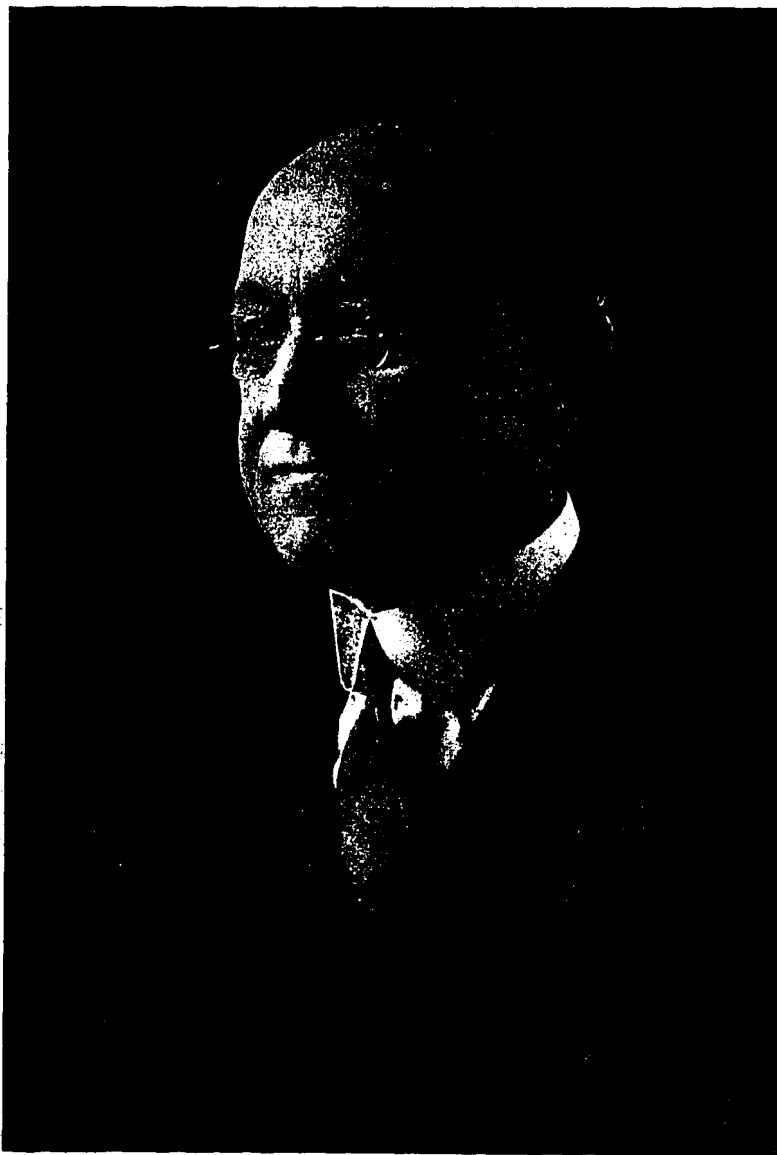

Students, alumni, Township officials and faculty packed the auditorium of the Senior High School Wednesday at a memorial service held at 8:30 for the school's late principal, Charles B. Pennypacker.

The service was attended by members of the Lower Merion School Board, Township Treasurer Peter C. Hess, the Rev. Edmund G. Rawson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Ardmore, and many leaders in Township and community life.

The principal address was made by Linwood Eisenberg, president of Slippery Rock Teachers' College, a close personal friend of Mr. Pennypacker's.

Testimonial talks were made by School Board members, by officers of the Alumni Association, by members of the faculty, by members of the Suburban Principals' Association, of which Mr. Pennypacker was president; and by members of the student body.

education association conventions, and there I learned to know and love the man for a personal worth and human touch which seldom comes from professional association.

"In Mr. Pennypacker we have always had a practical idealist whose faith in his fellow-men, and especially in the right thinking of his boys and girls, was boundless. I am sure that we are all anxious to carry on his organization and his policies as he would like to have them.

"EDWARD H. SNOW."

To Mr. Pennypacker from his faculty:

"He only, in a general honest thought
And common good to all, made one of them.

His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up

And say to all the world:

"This was a man!"

What more fitting tribute could we, the faculty of the Lower Merion Senior High School, pay to our friend and principal, Mr. Pennypacker, than to quote these words from the pen of a great master.

"He made one of us in his general thought of the common good to all. It was ever his wish that we might work together for the object dearest to him, the welfare of our high school. To that end he listened to our complaints, smoothed the way for us, and advised to do that which was right according to the dictates of our consciences.

He made one of us in his general growth in power and grace of his school family, so that for seventeen years and more we have been a household closely knit together by bonds light in their demands, but strong in sympathy and understanding.

The gentle example of his life has influenced all of us who went to him to learn how to guide the steps of those in our care. He understood the ways of young people, and it was his constant endeavor to have us understand these young people in a human, friendly fashion, and so by having patience with mistakes and sympathy for others to keep Lower Merion one in work and spirit.

No matter was too trivial for his kind attention; no great event concerned us without receiving words of praise for new victories won. He looked forward ever to a growth in the material and spiritual elements in the school, never back to the dust and discouragements of the past. Indeed, the elements were so mix'd in him that we stand up to say "This was a man!"

Work For Coming Year Is Outlined at County Meeting of Women's Clubs at North Wales

The Montgomery County meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs was held at North Wales with the Civic Club as hostess on Thursday, October 24. Mrs. Abram Bunn Ross, of Bala, formerly of Narberth, who is president, conducted the meeting, which was held in the new auditorium of the high school, a gift to the school from the Woman's Club—a memorial to the devotion and unselfishness of the women who gave the money that they had been holding for a club house building fund for the addition and equipment of this room.

The several chairmen outlined their work for the coming year: that every American community should be an ideal community; that the Home Department's work starts in the individual homes and every home should be a place of comfort, peace and beauty; the purchase of one hundred Sunday, November 3, will be day of missionary emphasis at Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, Narberth, in all the services of the day. The Bible School at 9:45 will open the day with a missionary program suitable to the occasion.

At 11 o'clock Dr. George Drach, corresponding secretary for the India field, will bring the missionary message. Main Line Scouts Win Honors at Jamboree Wynnewood Troop No. 1 carried off honors for the Main Line division, winning the district banner, at the Jamboree of Montgomery and Delaware County Boy Scouts held Saturday at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia. The Scoutcraft Cup was also won by the Wynnewood Troop, while Ardmore Troop No. 1 carried off the Campcraft Cup. A parade through the city preceded the affair.

Entertainment featured a good portion of the program, which was concluded with the presentation of the Eagle Badge, the highest rank in scouting. The following Main Line scouts were among the recipients:

Appointed—Re-elected

The appointment was made by Governor Fisher on Tuesday of Mrs. L. C. Douglass, of Elm Terrace, Narberth, as a member for Montgomery County of the Board of Trustees of Mothers' Assistance Funds. Mrs. Douglass was also re-elected vice president of the Montgomery County Council of Republican Women at a meeting held at Norristown on Tuesday.

FORE AND AFT

Many people are familiar with the difficulties of starting an old car. You kick the starter without result. You look at the gas. You kick the starter again. You cuss. You look at the engine. You try it again and just to be different it goes, for no apparent reason. You feed it the gas and eventually arrive safely at your destination.

The analogy may be far-fetched, but it was in some such manner that the opening performance of the Main Line Repertory Theatre, given at the Woman's Club of Bala-Cynwyd on Tuesday evening, occurred.

The play was W. Somerset Maugham's "The Circle," a pretty good play as plays go. It contains several sugar-coated pills of wisdom anent love, marriage and human life in general which, however, are not too obtrusive. The action goes along with sufficient dramatic interest to the climax which proves that all men (generically speaking) are fools, or more politely that they refuse to learn by experience.

In justice to the players, it must be said that unforeseen contingencies necessitated two changes in the cast at the last minute. Hamilton D. Shepherd, of Cynwyd, who was cast for the role of Teddie Lutton, was thrown in the Rose Tree races and unable to appear. His place was ably taken by William C. MacBride, Jr., of Germantown. C. Ashton McDonald, of Merion, who was to take the part of Arnold Champion-Cheney, M. P., was unable to do so due to the death of his father a couple of days before the performance. With only two days' preparation, Mr. Grady stepped into the breach and turned in a fair performance.

It began in a rather faltering fashion, but gained momentum as it proceeded. One thing that seems inexcusable though was the constant tendency on the part of several members of the cast to forget their lines. If this was confined to the understudies only, it would not have been so bad, but it was not. Mr. McBride, it might be mentioned, did not err in this respect, and Mr. Grady's occasional slips were excusable.

The outstanding performances were those of Robert B. Ely, III, of Merion, as Clive, the father, and Staats Cotsworth, of St. Davids, as Lord Porteous. Both of these young men gave finished performances and together with the spirited work of Elizabeth Barry Cunningham, of Rosemont, just about saved the play. Miss Cunningham's vivacity in the first act did much to counteract the lugubrious beginning.

Christine Schillard-Smith's performance as Elizabeth was not entirely convincing, though she was the most decorative member of the cast.

It seems unfortunate in a way that only one performance of each play is given. Even professional companies require a few presentations to insure things going smoothly. With an amateur group that necessity would seem to be of greater import.

The Repertory Theatre is fortunate in securing the Woman's Club for their plays as the auditorium is of a good size and it is readily accessible to all parts of the Main Line. A good sized gathering was on hand Tuesday night.

To complete my analogy of the opening paragraph, perhaps with this play off its chest, the Main Line Group may gather steam, and, in the manner of the old car which is hard to start, carry its patrons slowly but surely to the Elysian Fields of dramatic entertainment providing both their players and their audiences with many golden hours. At least I hope so.

Charles B. Pennypacker

It is difficult to say anything adequate regarding the unexpected departure of Charles B. Pennypacker, for eighteen years principal of the Lower Merion High School.

He has left many monuments. If his grave were never marked, his memory would not be soon forgotten.

On Montgomery Avenue is a tremendous monument of stone, brick, steel and wood to his perseverance, good management, and the faith of his friends and neighbors in him. His own personality was perhaps the most active force in the construction of the fine structures of the high school buildings.

Throughout many corners of the world are monuments of flesh and blood carrying gifts of his personality and character with them wherever they go. These are the pupils who came in regular contact with the man and profited by the association. The part of his life and spirit that passed on to them will not die, but will again be passed on to others so that as it achieves immortality it will become constantly more beautiful.

For his wife and children we extend our sympathy in their loss, for the community we share a new responsibility, for the future of our public education we dare only hope that his task may be filled again with the same conscientious, capable sort of man who will carry on the principles that have been so well laid for him.

Turning Out the Vote

It is a common fallacy, especially in a closely-knit Republican community such as this, that the Primary is really the election. In some respects it is, but a ballot cast at the Primary is not sufficient.

In the first place, whether the idea is pleasant or not, county favor, patronage, assistance, aid or whatever name you choose to give it, is determined a good deal by the volume of votes of any one section. If we turn out in great strength at the polls on Tuesday, we shall be able to make demands that otherwise will be laughed away in the light of the half-hearted interest in voting of our section.

In the second place, it has been known to occur that a candidate has been asleep at the switch at the time of election, and if you took the trouble to go out at the Primaries to cast your vote for a candidate, do him the honor of backing him up with a vote now that will not only help him, but will swell his majority and give him the prestige he will need during his term of office.

Finally, it is a privilege and a sacred heritage of all Americans to have a voice in their government. Sometimes the voice sounds very still and small and we feel that things have been so engineered that we have little to say about the running of things, but certainly conditions will never change as long as we sit at home, hide in our offices, tramp over the golf courses, or swap yarns somewhere when we might be making our voices heard.

Share Your Prosperity

The Welfare Federation campaign has opened and shortly will be over. Perhaps already you have received a letter or a personal visit from one of the many workers who give unselfishly of their time and effort in order that funds may be provided for the care and comfort of the less fortunate. However, it is never possible to reach every person within this area in such a short time. If you have not been asked to contribute, why not mail your check to the nearest headquarters of the Federation without solicitation? This composite charity, benefiting many classes and institutions, is worthy of your generous support.

The other day a friend told me of a Philadelphian whose name could rarely be understood over the 'phone. Because of this difficulty he took to saying: "Tell Mr. Smith it's Patrick Murphy." The idea impressed me and the next time I encountered the difficulty I gave up trying to spell my name and simply said: "Tell him that it's the Prince of Wales; I want to buy a horse from him. I'm calling from London so hurry up." The speed was amazing.

I'd like very much to go away and rest from resting next week. Will some one please write an Uncle Sigh's Column in my or for my absence? The rules are simple. Two and one-third pages of typewritten manuscript indented 10 and 70 and double spaced, or something like that. Don't worry, the editor will butcher it anyway.

Quota Half Raised

Approximately one half of the quota of $475,000 for the Main Line's share in the Welfare Federation's campaign has been raised. Up to Tuesday night 107 subscriptions had been received from Narberth, amounting to a total of $3114. Mrs. Fletcher W. Stites, chairman of the Narberth District, requests that all reports be gotten in as early as possible.

acres in "Hearts Content" by the State Federation; the County Library plan; the work for the blind being done by the Junior Department—were a few of the projects to be carried on this coming year.

The flower show held in connection with the meeting was a thing of beauty, the prizes being won by the Neighbors' Club of Hatboro and the Colony Club of Ambler. The Willow Grove Civic Club won the prize for arrangement, there being twenty-one varieties in its basket. The County Chorus, under the leadership of Mrs. Harold A. Davidson, showed fine progress in their work, rendering several selections.

Twelve members and the president of the Women's Community Club attended the meeting.

Liked Anniversary Edition

To the Editor of "Our Town:"

I thank you for sending me the fifteenth anniversary number of the "small" paper of which I was the first editor. It is indeed a wonderful satisfaction to know that "Our Town" has lived and thrived, and is now part of the great newspaper fraternity.

When we started the paper we were told that it would be like several others that had been tried and failed in a year's time. I sincerely hope that some, at least, of those pessimists are still in Narberth and that they have a copy of your splendid anniversary number. We surely builded better than we knew.

All kinds of success to you, my successors, and the good "Old Home Town."

Eugenie H. (Mrs. C. R.) Blackall.

To the Editor of "Our Town:"

Congratulations on the anniversary issue of "Our Town!" It is a splendid job. I found lots in it about the times I remember in Narberth.

Best regards and wishes for further things from your publishing work.

KENNETH B. WALTON.

Differs With Sports Writer on Lower Merion Team

To the Editor:

Being a student of Lower Merion Senior High School I wish to advise you of a difference of opinion on my part in several statements you made in your issue of October 25, concerning the Lower Merion-Haverford game. We are very proud of our team, it being one of the best in the history of the school.

Quoting from one paragraph "Lower Merion had best tighten up a notch or two in its football belt and knuckle down to brass tacks," sounds as though the team, under the wise and careful direction of Coach Adams, had had no work and all play. But you have misjudged them. The team had "tightened its belt" from the start and has been working its hardest all through the season as you should have observed from the past games.

Quoting from a second paragraph, "sooner or later one of these boys may be injured and then it will be just too bad." You have made it quite clear in this sentence that some misfortune must of necessity happen to the team. All our fellows are strong and well able to take some hard knocks, and we want to feel that nothing will happen to them. I hope I have made my disagreements clear to you.

Congratulating the paper on its present success, and wishing it further growth, I am,

Respectfully yours,
(Miss) ETHEL ACHENBACH.

Line League, which presentation is made yearly to winners of the Main Line pennant. "Gene" was brief in his talk to the audience:

"Fans of Narberth, I want to thank you for the loyal support you gave the team this year. It was wonderful to see five hundred to seven hundred people out to our games, especially those contests with Wyndmoor and Telford. In regard to the team itself, I would say that anyone could manage a bunch of such players as we have on this team.

"Also I want to take this opportunity to thank Charles Harnden, Harry Holler and Charley Eberts and the rest of the boys who helped me out during the season. I thank you."

Joe Berta a Keen Supporter.

To Joseph Berta, one of the most loyal fans in Narberth, goes the sole credit for the fact that the Narberth Club will be garbed in uniform dress for the first time since its inauguration. Mr. Berta's challenge to any one who would match his contribution of fifteen dollars added much color to the activities of the evening, when the challenge was immediately responded to by Ray Cabrey and Ed Dold, who led the contributors. One hundred and seventy-five dollars as an initial contribution was made for the purchase of baseball uniforms for the coming season.

Team Presented Sweaters.

Amid sustained applause, Mr. Durbin took the occasion to present twenty-one sweaters to members of the club and close associates. Those awarded in the order called are as follows:

Merrill Heckle, Mickey Burns, George Babb, Walter Humphreys, James Jefferies, Howard Graham, Ray Young, Vernie Fleck, John Mulligan, Bob Harris, Dick Blessing, Walter Masters, Thomas, Curwin and Lyons.

In addition to these, awards were also made to Joe Casey, bat-boy of the Narberth Ball Club for many years; Harry Holler, assistant manager; "Bill" Newborg, custodian of the apples, and Charley Eberts.

Gilfillan Intimates Resignation.

Robert (Bob) Gilfillan, twice named the most valuable player for the local club and leading batsman for the 1929 season, was presented with a Waterman Fountain Pen set in consideration of his outstanding batting performance for the season. Merrill Heckle, who trailed by a fraction, was also the recipient of a Waterman Fountain Pen set, which awards were made by Joseph Kelly, of Price Avenue, Narberth.

Gilfillan, recently graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, in a short talk intimated that the 1929 season was his last in local baseball activities. Bob Gilfillan is the most efficient shortstop that ever wore an "N" on his uniform, and will be greatly missed by the team and fans alike.

Unearth Ruins Which Gave Valley Forge Name

The site of the old forge for which Valley Forge was named has been uncovered on the west bank of Valley Creek in the park after months of excavation. It is near Mount Misery and just a few hundred feet from Washington Spring.

Two walls are plainly visible from the highway. The building was thirty-four by thirty-six feet. Among the pieces of iron uncovered in the last few days is one bearing the inscription "Andover," showing it came from the old Andover Furnaces, which were established in New Jersey in 1760.

An old cannon ball and a piece of template chunk stove are among the relics, which have been housed in Valley Forge Museum. The box where the tools were cooled in water is intact, but another box, where the ore was cooled, is not so well preserved.

The Valley Forge Park Commission has purchased the old forge at Hays Creek, Berks County, and this will be placed on the recently discovered Valley Creek site.

gling for recognition among the ball clubs of the Main Line and vicinity, there was a man who will always be remembered for his part in the betterment of the club. A leading hitter in 1915 with an average of .393 and a genius in base stealing, this person had the peculiar habit of holding a bat cross-handed. Nevertheless, the pitchers never forgot to duck after they threw in the spheroid.

The incident that gave him the title, "The Iron Man," was when he turned in two splendid victories for the borough nine in a Fourth of July baseball classic, having already defeated his adversary in a tight contest the previous day. This dignitary is none other than Fletcher W. Stites, ever a zealous supporter of the Narberth Baseball Club.

"Toastmaster, Members of the Championship Team, and Fellows," he began:

"This has been one of the most tremendous years in the history of baseball throughout the country and, personally, I want to say this particular occasion, tonight, is one of the most interesting I have ever attended. It is indeed a most gracious occasion—"

Mr. Stites then went on in his talk and, after holding the gathering fascinated for some time, he was forced to return to his feet in response to a grand ovation. In his epilogue he related an interesting happening in baseball when the team with which he was playing defeated the Cape May Club in a freak contest.

The score was even in the ninth; one man of the rival team was on first and another on third. Fletcher Stites, who was pitching, had issued a strike, two balls and then another strike. The man behind the plate, instead of throwing the ball back, walked up to Mr. Stites, handed him the ball and said:

"Say, it's getting dark and this umpire back here has had eyes. When you wind up this time, pretend you throw the ball and I'll hit my glove, making believe I received it."

Mr. Stites consented.

Following the catcher's instructions, he wound up and swung. The catcher hit his glove.

"Strike three, you're out," the umpire growled.

The batter turned around and looked at him.

"Say, what are ya trying to gimme? That ball was two feet outside!"

Boro Highway Committee Reports Completed Work

The following Highway Committee report of Councilman Robert F. Wood was presented to Council

The Suburban Construction Company has completed the work of paving Wynnewood Court, Grove Place and Rockland Road, and these improved streets now await the final acceptance of the Borough Council.

Final bills were received during the month for the work of resurfacing Wynnewood Avenue and revealed that the total cost was $20,237.90, of which $4210.20 was recovered from abutting property owners for work done by the Borough on their curbs and driveways. Deducting that item leaves a net total of $16,027.70. During the past month, we have collected from the county authorities the county-aid appropriation of $8000 for Wynnewood Avenue, leaving a final total cost to the Borough of $8027.70.

During the past month bills totaling approximately $400 covering the cost of repairing curbs and sidewalks, by order of the Borough, have been mailed out to property owners.

Our total labor expense for the month of September was $1192, divided as follows: For collecting 216 cubic yards of ashes, $214.56; for street cleaning, $729.76; for street maintenance, $123.66; for operating steam roller when rented, $21.60; for the Labor Day holiday, $53.64. The sewer maintenance item referred to was for repairing the storm sewer which crosses Conway Avenue north of Price Avenue where the passage of heavy trucks had crushed the terra cotta sewer pipes which at that point are necessarily near the surface of the street. We installed steel pipe at that point at a total cost of $107.71 for materials.

Fathers, Sons Dine at Friends' Central

First Annual Banquet at Overbrook School Pronounced Big Success.

The first annual father and son banquet was held at the Friends' Central Country Day School, Overbrook, last Friday evening, October 25, in the school gymnasium. One hundred and fifty-four places were set and a lively program of music and speeches resulted in one of the most enthusiastic evenings which the school has ever seen.

There were music leaders who kept the familiar songs coming through the air one after another. Gus Bohn, of Philadelphia, entertained with tremendous charm by his modern magic. Two seniors, Edison H. Stanhope, of Brookline, and James E. Whitesell, Jr., of Lansdowne, and one junior, George L. Fischer, Jr., of Overbrook, spoke on the topic, "What I Owe My Dad"; Isaac C. Sutton, Overbrook, who has two sons in the school, told the fathers what he owed his sons. Mr. Merrick on the varsity football team at University of Pennsylvania said a few words, likewise J. Folwell Scull, Jr., of former U. of P. fame and now a member of the staff at Friends' Central, spoke. Barclay L. Jones introduced each member of the faculty who were in attendance.

C. A. Herrick, of Overbrook, was chairman of the Committee on Arrangements. J. Leonard Mason, University of Pennsylvania, and W. Russell Green, of Narberth, president of the Home and School Association, aided him.

There are four schools in the league: Upper Darby, Haverford, Radnor and Lower Merion, and, as in previous years, the Ardmore Y. M. C. A. swimming pool will be the headquarters for both practice and dual meets.

Eleanor Boyle will act as captain for Radnor and Rose Talley, manager. Dot Ritchie has been appointed manager for the Upper Darby team with Margaret Adams as captain. Betty Maris will act as captain for Haverford and Katherine Briggs, manager. The SHOOR-TRED MOCCASIN FOR CHILDREN lets Nature do its own work

INDIANS, wise in the ways of Nature, fashioned the first moccasin. They built it to give barefoot freedom, with protection—Nature's own way of building foot-health. Growing feet were given ample room to develop the invigorating, gripping action of the toes. The body weight was poised on the outer bony structure of the foot, just as Nature intended. Thus, through exercise of the foot muscles, and strengthening of the arch, they built their famous foot-health. . . . Along this same principle, Geuting's designed the original, modernized moccasin for children . . . changing it simply to meet the needs of this modern age. It is the Shoor-Tred you see above . . . built of almost scuff-proof Elkskin, with flexible, glove-like leather soles that wear and wear. It is the shoe that Philadelphia mothers favor for their children, because they have tested its health-building qualities, and know its low cost in the long run.

Summer Reading Maps Displayed at Library

There have been on display all this week at the library the fourteen maps which represent the work of the fourteen girls and boys who, during the summer, traveled around the world by means of books. The course was outlined to meet the reading capacity of the children and each was required to read from ten to fourteen books from a given list, to report to Miss Church, the librarian, satisfying her that the books had been read intelligently; and then to trace on the maps given to each traveler the journey as it progressed.

While the effort was not too great for any child to make, nevertheless the amount of concentration required in reading the books, and the persistence needed in following a plan to the end, eliminated about one-half of the contestants, some when in plain sight of the goal. The results, however, were gratifying, and not the least among the good effects of such a course of reading must be counted an interest in and a certain knowledge of the children of other lands. Such an acquaintance surely will help, if ever so little, in bringing about that much desired result, the brotherhood of man.

The summer vacation reading is a combined effort of the Mothers' Council and of the Library, and completed this fall its third year. Certificates and prizes of suitable books were awarded to those who met the requirements and were presented at the October meeting of the Mothers' Council that the parents might also share in the delight of the winners. The names of the children who won the awards were given in last week's "Our Town," and will remain on exhibit for a few days more at the library.

Ardmore Diggings Reveal Fireplace and Chimney of Revolutionary Type Farmhouse

Evidence of the old Conestoga Railroad, which ceased to function close to 100 years ago, the fireplace and chimney of a Revolutionary farmhouse 18 feet under the ground and 20 or more Indian arrowheads embedded in the trunk of a large sycamore tree believed to be several centuries old are recent discoveries in Ardmore.

They were made by workmen in connection with the transformation of "Thornbrook," an old Main Line estate, into what is becoming a thriving business community, and already includes as a nucleus of further expansion a bank, telephone exchange building, post office and 12 stores.

Noted for tall, stately shade trees and shrubbery and flower gardens dating back to an early period, the estate was formerly the property of the late Edwin Saunders Dixon.

Uncover Railroad Ties.

The remains of what at one time was the old railroad were discovered by workmen while shaving off four or five feet of top soil to lower the surface of the tract level. Beneath the rich loam cultivated as vegetable and flower gardens, they found solid railroad ties to which at one time were secured iron rails.

The old Conestoga Railroad entered Philadelphia near City Line bridge at a point where the Pencoyd Steel Company has its plant. Its course westward was along Montgomery avenue from Bala, through Narberth, Ardmore, Haverford and along old Railroad avenue, which still bears that name. From Haverford it continued westward to Villanova, where it joined the Philadelphia and Columbia Railroad. The engines used were similar in type to Old Ironsides.

Each stone is about two feet and has two holes where heavy iron bolts formerly held down the rails to form the roadbed. The granite blocks were arranged in two orderly rows about seven feet apart, and each tie bears an age-encrusted rust mark where the plate went. The bolts also secured the plates fast. Four of the stones now mark the driveway at the entrance of the Haverford home of Leonard W. Williams.

Find Old Fireplace.

The fireplace and chimney were found when workmen dug a trench for a sewer. The trench was dug eight feet wide and twenty feet deep. Much to the amazement of those working on the job they came across the remains of the old farmhouse at a depth of about 18 feet. In the fireplace, which proved to be almost as large as a small room, was found an old iron cradle or crane. It was necessary to dynamite the walls.

According to Frederick W. Dreher, architect for the development, the old masonry remained, but timbers, beams and other woodwork which at one time formed part of the house had rotted away. The walls were about two feet thick, and each stone fit the one next to it like children's building blocks. The fireplace was approximately six by seven feet, Mr. Dreher said.

Had the workmen who were employed by A. L. Fretz, contractor, been inclined toward archeology, they would probably have found more relics, for the section in the immediate vicinity is rich in history and tradition.

The Dixon estate, a tract of about six acres, included a large mansion, garage and greenhouse. It was heavily wooded even at the time the property was purchased by the Suburban Company a few years ago. When it was transferred to the new ownership, the first thing the developers did was to cut down about 375 trees. They then made a contract and took off about 80,000 cubic yards of dirt in order to level the property.

The dirt was easily disposed of in the neighborhood where depressions in topography exist. The gardens were found to be covered over with about five feet of top soil, a century or more old. It was so rich and loamy that it was sold for more than it cost to get it out.

Arrowheads Discovered

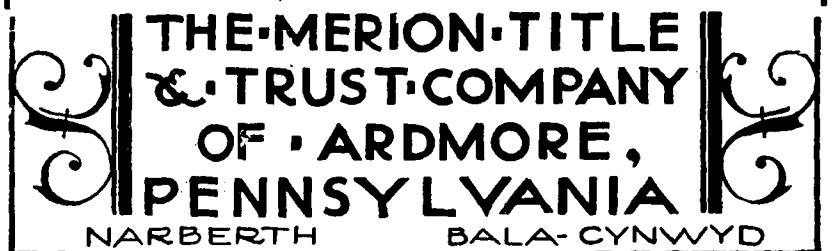

It was the fall season when the trees were cut down, and because of this fact, the trunks, many of them large in girth and diameter, were cut up into firewood. The Indian arrowheads were discovered while this operation was in progress.

How they got there nobody knows, but there are several plausible theories. Indians fought usually from ambush. When one chief killed another, the killer became a marked man in the eyes of members of the tribe of the dead chief. Either the murderer was hunted down until killed or he showed the white feather and gave up.

It was considered an honor to be the one to get the hunted chief. In the event the latter gave himself up he was stood up against a tree and every one fired an arrow at him. Inasmuch as it was considered a great honor, every little child in the tribe who could draw a bow was given the opportunity so that when he grew up he could say he had taken a hand in meting out justice to the murderer of a chief. It is hardly likely that all the arrows would find their true mark. This, therefore, might account for the arrowheads embedded in the tree.

At one time the Dixon estate, which is bounded by Montgomery Pike, Anderson and Coulter Avenues, belonged to Allen B. Rorke, who was contractor for the Pennsylvania Railroad. Ardmore was known in those days as Athensville and it is from the latter that the present Athens Avenue received its name.

Mr. Dreher, in relating the unusual discoveries, revealed that among other things a little brook formerly ran through the property and under the old Conestoga Railroad. Some years ago it was covered up, but the course it took down the little valley to Mill Creek, of which it was a tributary, still is easily discernible.

Unearth Creek Bed.

When the cellar for the bank was dug the bed of the buried stream was struck and it was necessary to put in much heavier foundations than originally anticipated to prevent settling. The name of "Thornbrook," given to the property of the Dixon family, indicates that it may have gotten its name from the brook and character of the underbrush.

According to Mr. Dreher, who is an authority on local Main Line history, and has an old atlas showing Ardmore as Athensville, the old Conestoga Railroad took a serpentine course dodging in and out of estates until it got to Villanova, because there were more landowners, and, consequently, smaller estates in the Narberth, Ardmore and Haverford section than beyond.

Mill Creek Road starts at the former Dixon estate and winds its way down the valley. During Revolutionary times there was a mill on Mill Creek Road about a half-mile down from the new development. Here in this mill glass was ground and mixed with flour, which was then given to the British.

Used by Washington's Troops.

When the old Conestoga Railroad was flourishing, Montgomery Avenue was known as the Philadelphia, Bala and Bryn Mawr Turnpike. Washington's troops marched out Montgomery Avenue and the old Lancaster Turnpike, sometimes called the Conestoga Road, through Ardmore to Valley Forge and then pushed on as far as Phoenixville.

They returned by way of Mill Creek

Road into Haverford Road, Powder Mill Lane and into what is now known as Penfield. City Line was then Township Line. At the old plenished their supply of powders, and subsequently worked their way around northwest of Philadelphia, eastward to the banks of the Delaware at New Hope. Later they met and defeated the British at Trenton and subsequently recrossed the Delaware into Pennsylvania at what is now known as Washington's Crossing.

Surprising as the discovery of a farmhouse buried beneath tons of dirt appears to be, the location in which it was found was easily accounted for by Mr. Dreher.

He pointed out that the structure had stood in what formerly was a hollow, part of the same little valley through which the brook once coursed its way. Houses were built against hillsides in olden times as a protection against the elements of winter. Later, when the railroad was built, the farm house, which was then abandoned, was covered up. Nobody would have thought of demolishing the structure when an effort was being made to fill the hollow, Mr. Dreher said.

The Library Table or the Gutter?

Why does every great National Advertiser buy only PAID Circulation? Why is every big advertiser contemptuous of free distribution or hand-bills tossed on porch or yard?

If advertising is to be worth one cent to you it must be in the proper medium:

A RESPECTED NEWSPAPER WITH PAID CIRCULATION

Your business signature wind-tossed in the gutter hurts your standing and wastes your money. Paid circulation reaches the library table; the rest reaches the scrap basket.
